

February 1, 2017

Who got an Oscar?
Lectrosonics got an Oscar!

We are pleased to announce that, Lectrosonics, Inc., one of our long-term clients, has received an Academy Award for Technical Achievement by the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences!

Yes, Oscars are awarded for technical achievement as well—not just to actors. The Technical Achievement Academy Awards recognize contributions of significant value to the process of making motion pictures. The Academy chose Lectrosonics, a home-grown New Mexico company, for this year's award. According to the Academy, Lectrosonics' Digital Hybrid Wireless System is to be recognized for advancing "the state of wireless microphone technology by developing a method to digitally transmit full-range audio over a conventional analog FM radio link, reducing transmitter size, and increasing power efficiency."

Lectrosonics has long been one of the world's favorite providers of wireless microphone technology. From Broadway to Hollywood, the Olympic Games, courtrooms, and even the presidential debates, Lectrosonics' products are trusted to capture the difficult sound environments in such high-stake productions across the world. Lectrosonics will be sending three of its engineers to Beverly Hills, to receive the award at the 89th Oscars, to be held Sunday, February 26th, 2017. Keep an eye out for them!