Featuring: Andrew Werling

Peacock Law's clients are diverse, each with unique needs that demand versatile assistance. Paralegal Andrew Werling is our go-to for those out-of-the-box projects many of our clients need. Having started in Peacock Law's docketing department as a docketing specialist almost 8 years ago, he knows IP and what must be done to maintain it. Andrew now assists Peacock Law with mapping and tracking complex and extensive IP portfolios, organizing business agreement histories, coordinating patent maintenance and trademark renewals, managing documents, and researching those unique issues for our unique clients.

Andrew grew up in Albuquerque, and went to college at New Mexico State University, where he earned a Bachelor of Arts in English, followed by a Master of Arts in Creative Writing. In love with learning, he has done extensive additional college coursework at University of New Mexico in history, philosophy, and religious studies. In addition to his paralegal work and coping with constant writer's block in his creative endeavors, Andrew is actively studying for holy orders in the North American Catholic Ecumenical Church, where he is currently a Sub-Deacon. Other passions include art appreciation, films, music, and graphic novels and comic books. Back in 2009, he was the singer for local rock band Free Range Clones. An animal lover who is unable to care for a pet at this time, he can often be found on weekends scrolling through pictures and videos of other peoples' critters, which is one of the best therapies available on social media.
